I have no idea if this is a legitimate question, but does anyone have advice for learning how to find such memory-hacking "solutions" and "software" as this? I have googled this, but the search terms are all sorts of different. Note that what I am trying to find is memory-hacking software, "solutions" which will allow me to do things like "shortcut", or "Rasterbator", or "Jw player" "service", or anything of that sort I do not know what these things do, nor do I want to know, as long as I can avoid downloading them. Why? Because I don't want to be "trapped" in some "service", get "hacked" or have spyware installed on my computer. I'd like to know how to avoid that. Am I even asking the right question? A: 1. Wipe the memory This won't completely solve the problem, but it's a very simple start. Wipe the memory of your computer. Simply delete all the files on the hard drive. Clean your computer's registry by using the WinEdt Registry Cleaner. My account on the site was removed while attempting to edit another answer here. I tried finding a new account, but failed. 2. Find a way to change the startup Alternatively, you can change the computer's startup settings. These two images show how you can access the
